THE COURTS.

The Kilbourn Case Given to the Jury, Who Are Deliberating on It.

Continuation of the Bigelow Embezzlement Case-Other Legal Matters.

THE KILBOURN CASE GIVEN TO THE JURY. In the Kilbourn case yesterday District Attorney Corkhill concluded his address to the jury. Senator Voorliges followed. During his address to which the large audience paid close attention, Mr. Voorbees referred to the English barons at Runnymede, to Hampden and his associates, and to the men of Boston in 1773, who stood only for principle. As a climax, he referred to the sufferings of St. Paul, and said doubtless some sharp faced lawyer went about the streets of Jerusalem. and said it did not matter, he merely stood for principle.
"St. Paul," observed Mr. Wilson, "did not sue for damages."

"It doesn't matter," said the senator. "He got a bigger verdict from public opinion than any other man ever got. I have no doubt the judge is right. He is defending somebody with whom he is in sympathy, who sneered the public that that they have been some body.

at Paul at that time." The senator, after glorifying the plaintiff as a martyr for principle—who stood for the liberties of mankind—discussed at length the causes leading to the real estate pool investigation and Mr. Kilbourn's imprisonment. He declared that, as a matter of fact, the government never had, and never could have, lost a deliar through the operations of Jay Cooke & Co., and that this investigation was tasted by excessing real ways a file trial.

started by excessive zeai upon a false trial.

Judge Cox charged the jury briefly, hold that the case was for compensatory damages and the jury were expected to assess the amount. The jury retired shartly after 1 o'clock, and the judge waited until 2 o'clock, when he left. The jury will bring in a scaled verdict this morning.

CONTINUATION OF THE BIGELOW CASE.

In the trial of Benjamin F. Bigslow, for embezziement from the National Bank of the Republic, which was continued yesterday before Judge Wylie in the criminal court, one witness—Mr. C. S. Bradley, the cashier—occupied the stand all day. The proceedings were so monotonous and uninteresting that most of the audience which had come with were so monotonous and uninteresting that most of the audience which had come with the expectation that "Little Horace" would be examined and would teil what he knew about the ex-detectives, left the court room carly, and few beside the lawyers and summoned witnesses sat the day through.

Before any testimony was taken Mr. Cook, attorney for Bigelow, asked and obtained from the court an order upon the United States marshal of New York enabling him to summon witnesses in that state. Mr. Cook also filed a plea of former jeopardy which the court overruled. Mr. Cook objected to Bradley's testifying concerning any other accountley's testifying concerning any other accounts than that of J. F. Steven's, which was the case they had elected to try. The court overruled this objection.

Bradley then read from the letter blotter a oredit to Stevens of April 29, 1882, of $3,290, and several credits to other parties. He showed that in several instances there were credits on the pass books which did not appear on the blotter. He identified a note of Dearing & Johnson for $1,000, and said that on June 21 Bigelow had given it to him and the day that the bad hear paid and he had the said that the on June 21 Bigelow had given it to him and told him that it had been paid and he had pinned the money to it and forgot to pay it over at the time. The pass book showed that the firm had deposited $2,500 some days before. The witness showed from the accounts of F. K. Ward, Spicer & Compton, W. B. Downing & Bro., and others, that amounts had been credited to thuse parties on their pass books which did not appear on Bigelow's blotter. which did not appear on Bigelow's blotter. He identified a note of Childs & Son for $7:22.21, which had been paid, and for which no credit had been entered on the books of

On the cross-examination by Mr. Cook the witness said that he did not know, of his own knowledge, that Bigelow ever embezzied any of the bank's money. He did not know that any officer of the bank ever used any of the bank's money for speculating in New York. Mr. Cook tried to show by the witness that he had some animosity against Bigelow he had some suimosity against Bigelow because the latter was trying to got his position as cashier. There was a long and tedious cross-examination concerning the deposit tickets as to when they were kept, who had charge of them, and how they were handled. Mr. Cook produced a large map of the interior of the bank building, and showed by the witness that it was possible for other employes to go to Bigelow's desk. The deposit tickets were put on a spin-dle, and sometimes when Bigelow was very busy he did not post the amounts for some hours afterward.

Bradley was still on the stand when the court adjourned, and it is probable that his examination will take up to-day's session of NOTES.

In the equity court yesterday a decree was passed divorcing Hannah C. Foulke from Chas W. Foulke and giving her the custedy of the children. She is also permitted to resume her maiden name of Miles.

The will of Elien Edmunds was filed yester-day. She leaves all property to her children. The will of Albert M. Perrottit was also filed. All property is left to the children of his de-ceased brother Louis.

Contracts for Cannon Awarded. An ordnance department officer stated to a REPUBLICAN reporter last evening that the contract for manufacturing one hundred two and a half inch bronze life saving cantwo and a half inch bronze life saving cannons of the Lyle pattern had been awarded to the West Point Foundry association, of Cold Springs, N. Y.; also, the contract for L200 projectiles for the same guns. This supply is intended to complete the quipment of the new life saving stations, as well as to refurnish several of the old ones and to have a reserve on hand.
The Lyle gun was invented in 1878 and is The Lyle gun was invented in 1878, and is admitted by foreign governments to be the most superior life saving gun ever invented. The projectile, also invented by Capt. Lyle saving purposes, is known as the cahot." It is fired through the rigging of a stranded vessel with a line attached, and its peculiarity is that the shot invaria-ily "grapples" somewhere. Its peculiar whis-tle, which can be heard far above the roar of

of the masts, is a cheering sign to unfortunate Theatre Comique.

e sea, shricking of the winds, and creaking

The bill at the Comique this week is one of great variety, and has proved very attractive. Among the numerous performers may be mentioned Wayne and Wilson in their gro-tesque songs and dances; Miss Julia Walcott, in an excellent selection of serio comic songs; the Loyals, gymnasts, whose performances THE Celebrated Orator, are simply wonderful; Ella Zuila, who makes s dive from the dome of the theatre, and Luin, in her exercises on a silver bicycle. The afterpiece, a burlesque on Offenbach's "Grand Duchess," is decidedly funny and causes great merriment.

A DRY FOG.

What Causes the Peculiar Redness of the Atmosphere After Nightfall.

The peculiar character of the sunsets in this city during the past week, and the fact that the western horizon has been flooded long after nightfall by a bright red glow, beleved by many persons to be the result of distant conflagrations, induced a reporter of THE REPUBLICAN to seek out Lieut, J. W. Powell, of the signal service last evening and interrogate him relative to the matter. The lieutenant said: "Fae redness of the sky is due to a phenemionen which occurs about this seases of the year called a dry fog. In the Inited States this frequently occurs in November or the latter part of October, and is commonly known as Indian summer. This appearance is characterized by a havy condition of the structure of the style absence of atmosphere, a redness of the sky, absence of rain, and a mild temperature. This appears to result from a dry and stagnant state of the atmosraere, during which the air, particu-larly the upper portions, becomes filled with dust and smoke arising from numerous fires, by which its transparency is greatly im-paired. A general rain cleans out these im-purities. This phenomenon is not peculiar to the United States, being frequently observed in Europe. During the long periods of drought in summer the same peculiar appear-ance of the sky is observed."

Other scientific men stated that the redness was an almost sure sign of "falling weather in the near future.'

THE ANTHROPOLOGICAL SOCIETY. Interesting Address by Maj. Powell on Human Evolution.

The society reassembled in the army medical museum last evening, Col. Garrick Mallery, U. S. A., in the chair. A large and intelligent audience gathered to hear the annual address of Maj. J. W. Powell, the retiring president, on human evolution. Briefly stating his viows respecting the origin and autiquity of man, the speaker assumed that man was widely distributed over the earth in early quaternary times. Now, everywhere over the earth we find low down in the geological strata the rudest implements to be the oldest, similarly, in society and lan-guage the least complex are the oldest. The purpose of the address was to trace the evolu-tion of human art and society from its earliest forms to its highest perfection in our day. From the five fields of investigation somatology, technology, sociology, philology, and philosophy, we gather the fact that in the earliest time there was the greatest diversity of human activity, and that progress has been to unity. Now, in human evolution there is a higher law than that of the survival of the fittest, in obedience to which man is not so much the sport of nature as its master. Mai Powell track manually the mathed of so much the sport of nature as its master. Maj. Powell traced minutely the method of progression from the one state to the other in man's physiology, arts, sociology, language, and philosophy. The evolution of man has been subjective as to his mind, and objective as to his arts, institutions, languages, and been subjective as to his mind, and objective as to his arts, institutions, languages, and systems of opinions. Both, however, have biotic origin; and the two are interdependent, mutually helpful, and complementary. As civilization advances the interdependencies become more complex and tend to unity. The survival of the fittest is not of the artist, but of the art; and man is no longer the sport of every wind, but the master of his environment. The life history of institutions, both regulatives and operative, was most lucidly sketched, since operative, was most lucidly sketched, since Maj. Powell has devoted many years to this particular subject. All regulative institutions are to secure peace, either by terminating or by preventing controversy. This portion of the address was an eloquent tribute to the persistent struggle of our race to secure the practice of justice. The revolution of philosophy has been, first, mythologic second mytaphysical mythologic; second, metaphysical, and, lastly, logical, or scientific. As regards the evolution of mind the speaker limited himself to the progress that has taken place in the history of man, by invention, by accultura-tion or learning from nature, and by instruction. Maj. Powell closed with an eloquent defense of the doctrine of human evolution against the brute philosophy which denies the wisdom of charity, and the speaker de-fended most ably the universal harmony of the latest science.
